The Center for Fine Art Photography presents a retrospective of the work of Hal Gould February 23 to March 24, 2007 in its Fort Collins gallery. Hal Gould is both a mentor and inspiration to many, giving selflessly of his time and knowledge to foster an appreciation of the fine art of photography. This retrospective features 60 years of photography by Mr. Gould. It includes portraits, travel images, landscapes, nudes, abstractions and western scenes. The owner of Camera Obscura Gallery in Denver, CO., Gould's photographic images are inspired works of art. An opening reception is planned with Mr. Gould on Friday, February 23rd from 6pm to 8pm.

Also on display in the Center's second gallery, will be a solo show by featured photographer, Bruce K. Haley, Jr. Mr. Haley, of Charleston, WV, "presents nature not as the lens captures it, but as I see, feel and experience it – an endless array of exciting colors, shapes and designs". Mr. Haley will be here to discuss his work during the Fort Collins Gallery Walk on March 2, from 6 to 9pm.

The Center for Fine Art Photography is a non-profit organization whose mission is to showcase the work of leading and emerging photographers and to educate the public about the collectable value of photographic art.
